Our Story

Pickwick & Frolic stands on the site of what was once the Euclid Avenue Opera House, built in the 1800's. For Cleveland, the landmark was the grand marvel of its day, frequented by thousands from across the region and beyond.

Charles Dickens, a wonderfully inventive comic artist, won his first literary fame with the Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club. Published in serial form, the monthly installments described the humorous adventures and misadventures of a gallery of eccentric characters. In its day, Pickwick episodes were described as having made the commonplace uncommon.

Today, in much the same way, the Seinfeld episodes are described as "much ado about nothing." A little known fact is that Charles Dickens journeyed to America in the 1800's and on one of those occasions visited Cleveland. We like to think that when Dickens is in town, he visits Pickwick & Frolic.

Pickwick & Frolic reflects our passion for the conviviality that propelled the adventures of the original Pickwick Club. In today's culture, all too often, we eat and drink because we are unhappy. In Pickwick, they eat and drink because they are happy - nothing more aptly measures the differences between Pickwick's world and ours.

Dickens' Pickwick Papers, the literary counterpart to today's sitcom, was written in serial form and published in 20 monthly issues. The installments became wildly popular, and anticipation of the next episode so great, that it was said "real life was the interlude between one issue of Pickwick and another." Modestly, we hope that in some way, for you too, life will be as an interlude between one visit to Pickwick & Frolic and another. Please, enjoy...Eat, Drink & Frolic!
